

Happily Steve T is now well enough to send orders and also publish replete with content that would give the Man On The Clapham Omnibus cause to reach out to his Chambers.

Now – pagination. There I was, trying to squeeze in the games as usual and avoid white space. But then the penny dropped that it just doesn't matter that much these days. Just about everybody gets the pdf and that doesn't get meaningfully bigger if there are more pages with the same content. The few paper recipients (must be careful not to glamorise them here – Jeff already took inordinate and perverse pleasure when I described him and his ilk as “die-hards”) will have an extra page or two but a more readable layout. So – there – I've had the therapy and can now cope with white space here, there and everywhere. OMG – it's everywhere ... calm, calm, calm. Remember GBH? It were wonderful and not just for Michael Palin intoning his calm mantra. Do they still do TV like that? Well, yes actually.

And that's it for this page. There may be burble elsewhere - or I might just leave it all as white space ...

Comments

- George 2nd again, must spot the gaps earlier, congratulations to Graham for winning and Rob for deciphering some of my many obscure moves during this game.
- Martin Well that was pretty poor I must say. I was a huge mistake not getting one of the minors and my position spiralled downwards thereafter. Still enjoyable although my options were very limited. Congratulations to Graham, and thanks to Rob for running the game.
- GM Yes, Martin was disadvantaged early and special thanks to him for staying with us actively. Graham orchestrated his and George's game to the advantage of both, but to the greater benefit of himself. Well he would, wouldn't he? So thanks also to Lyndon and David for working at it throughout and deserved congratulations to Graham and George.

George spotted that the CGR quote was not changing even though it had a 5 train. Apologies for that. I have redone SR6 and George is the one that suffers (in comparison with the incorrect adjudication). The updated version is on the web but the changes are that Lyndon bought a new GCR rather than an old CV, John bought two old CV and not one old CV and George bought one new CV and not two new CV. Cash updated. This time we get into the diesels without gaining an trainless company, which is nice, so it's orders for two ORs next time ...

Don – You cannot place a garrison unless the company has enough credit. George – Please and please specify tile orientations, there are two ways to lay a 55 in IO14 with a straight between J13 and H15. And you were ambiguous in this way in 1856X19 as well (a 59 on L13 can go two ways with a “prong that points to L13”). John – The number of loans is limited to number of shares in player hands. Tony – You cannot sell a share in an company when the bank has 50% of that company. David – What’s your story? Tony & John – I took your dealing orders literally but I reckon that you did not suffer in comparison.

Looks like we have three "poison 4 trains" in this game - but the Erie may just have to take one of them ...

Last time I did not report that the MP redeemed a share from Jeff, nor did I show that holding. Apologies - not at all helpful, although maybe you were forced to deduce it from the relevant values. This time there are two redemptions and they are reported - no deducing is necessary. Hopefully no other reporting issues this time as we get prices protected for the first time ...
